DOCTORS DEFENDANTS
IN DAMAGE SUITPlaintiff Charges They Located Fracture of Leg at Wrong Place.

The hearing of the damage suit of J. L. Gamble against the Southern railroad, Dr. Cooper Holtzclaw and Dr. E. B. Johnson was begun in the circuit court Wednesday before Judge Nathan L. Bachman. The suit, which is for $15,000, charges Drs. Holtzclaw and Johnson with malpractice, it being stated that as the result of their alleged carelessness the plaintiff has been rendered a cripple for life. One of his legs being some inches shorter than the other. The Southern railroad is named as a party to the suit by reason of the fact that the accident which required the services of Drs. Holtzclaw and Johnson happened on that road and the two defendants are physicians and surgeons for the railroad company. Ed Finlay is representing the plaintiff, and Allison Lynch & Phillips the defendants.

Plaintiff charges that on Oct. 13, 1916, he fell underneath a Southern railroad freight car and received severe injuries, the bone in his right leg being fractured and the toes on his left foot crushed. He claims that the railroad was taken to the Highland Sanitarium where the defendant physicians attended him and in treating him performed their duties negligently, carelessly and with lack of proper skill. He charges that at the first examination the physicians did not discover the fracture in his right leg which was later found to be three inches below the hip, but they diagnosed the fracture, two or three inches above the knee, and treated his leg for that supposed fracture. Plaintiff charges that by means of an X-ray six weeks after the accident the fracture was located two or three inches below the hip and consisted of a fractured bone as well as being dislocated. They also charged that the bones had overlapped and flesh had grown between them making it imperative to perform an operation. His operation, the plaintiff charges, caused him to remain two months more in the hospital and when he finally left he was for six months forced to walk on crutches. Plaintiff charges that now as the result of the carelessness and negligence of the defendant physicians the sore on his hip is still running and open, and his right leg is several inches shorter than the left, making him a cripple for life. Plaintiff further charges that since the accident he has been unable to work at his trade as a moulder and has suffered intense physical pain and great mental anguish.

The jury took the case late Wednesday afternoon and returned a verdict in favor of the defendants.

MEN FALL FOR CHARMS
OF WOMAN AND FIGHTGeorge Murphy Gets Opportunity to Reflect Upon His Fighting Proclivities.

The little word "it" surely and slowly paved the way right into the middle of the workhouse for George Murphy, colored, and Wednesday morning he was found guilty of carrying a pistol, for which he drew $50 fine and costs. In two cases of felonious assault he was fined $50 and costs and given a three months' sentence in each in the Hamilton county workhouse. A woman was the cause of it, and George says if he had not fallen victim to her charms, if he had not gone in search of the man who had alienated her affections, if he had not armed himself with a pistol, if he had not become involved with Alex. McCutcheon, his rival, if he had not had a fight with Alex, and if he had not pulled out his pistol and fired four times at Alex, then he would not be languishing behind prison bars. But there is another "it" and a more sure yet serious "it," and that is—if George's aim had not been as bad as his judgment, then he would have faced four charges of murder instead of two charges of felonious assault.

The facts about the case were these: George Murphy became beguiled with the charms of a woman, and the same charms proved beguiling to Alex. McCutcheon, and when they met near the river bank a fight ensued, during which Murphy drew his pistol and blazed away four times, with the result that he never touched his rival, but shot four times into the air. The two prosecutors in the cases on Wednesday morning were John Pitts and Ella Taylor.

Many Police Active.

A large "audience" greeted Judge Martin Fleming in the city court on Wednesday morning as a result of the activity of local detectives and members of the police department. Many of those composing the "audience" were alleged to have been shirking work, and his honor discharged those who had jobs. A number of the others fared badly, the fines assessed ranging from $10 and costs to $50 and costs. Several were committed to the U. S. Penitentiary. Detectives Marion Perkins and W. C. Smith were responsible for the appearance of Pony Kelly, who, when fined $50 and the costs, asked if he could pay out. When told that he could he ran his hand down in his pocket and pulled out a large roll of bills, took therefrom the wherewithal for his fine and then departed. U. S. Officers participating in the loitering arrests were Detectives Marion Perkins, W. C. Smith, Robert Pearce, Joe Paradiso, Paul Brown and Carl Whiteley; Captains Croft and Baker of the police department; Patrolmen McGee, J. H. COTTON QUOTATIONS
DECLINE 11 TO 23 POINTS

New York, April 10.—There was a renewal of liquidation and scattering pressure at the opening of the cotton market today. Uncertainty as to the outcome of today's conference between the cotton goods trade and Washington officials was probably the chief factor.

The fall in value of Liverpool. First prices were barely steady at a decline of 11 to 23 points, and the active months 24 to 24 points lower after the call, with July touching 27.67¢ and October 31.06¢.

Offerings increased after the publication of the weather bureau report. This carried no complaints regarding too new crop start and was considered one of the most favorable initial reports in the history of the market. July contracts sold off to 27.62¢ and October to 30.96¢, with active months generally showing losses of 27 to 41 points. Trade interests were buyers on the decline and there was enough covering to cause rallies of several points around midday.

New Orleans Cotton.—Selling of 5 points on May on the first call here today, cotton fell off under selling stimulated by expectations of favorable weekly crop reports. At the end of the first half-hour prices were 19 to 27 points under the close of yesterday.

The market turned dull in the afternoon and was inclined to sag. At 1 o'clock prices were at a net decline of 20 points.

LESSONS DRAWN FROM GREAT WORLD STRUGGLE AND ITS BEAR-ING ON RELIGION.

(By W. T. Ellis.)
(Sunday School Lesson for April 14.)

Doubtless it would help clarify the thinking of some persons concerning this great war if they were to look at only one section of it, that part which is comprehended within Bible lands, and realize that the question is whether Christianity and civilization, or Islam and deterioration and terrorism, is to rule over the ancient pages. The Christian allies are thundering in dread gunpowder tones, "Thou art the Christ"—Thou, and not Mohammed. The issue that has brought on this long expected war is at root the question of the place of Christ in life. Shall the Carpenter be sovereign or the camel-driver? May Moslem continue to oppress Christian?

Vivid and near as this supreme question of life is made by the war in Europe, it is not singular for it thus to be actualized. This is the issue which has been dividing human society, and creating wars and conflict, ever since the gentle Galilean peasant trod the pleasant fields of Palestine. Walking close by every nation, and rising to assert itself at the most unexpected moment, is this question of questions, which no man can escape for himself—"Whom say ye that I am?"

Getting Down to Basics.

A town meeting is called to consider an important and immediate issue, and then it fritters its opportunity away by irrelevant questions and discussions. This is so with almost every gathering. Lying on the surface of this tragic conference at Caesarea Philippi, which we study today, are many subjects for discussion. Yet the bedrock issue is wholly one of the character and mission of Christ. Was He the Messiah, the One long prophesied and expected?

The lieutenants of Jesus reported to their leader the common opinion of their day and world. He was reputed by one party, they said, to be the Baptist; another declared that He was Elijah come again; others contended that He was Jeremiah in the flesh. All conceded Him an extraordinary place. This was the opinion of the scholars and of the sophisticated men of the time. The world's best wisdom agreed that Jesus was not like other men; and the most grudging of verdicts in the centuries since grants Him at least this much.

Not flattered, but rather disheartened by this report, Jesus turned from the wisdom of the wise to the simple faith of His own friends. Then, as now, the eyes of the heart had clearest vision. Lowly belief saw further than scholarly skepticism. Peter's prompt response, boldly out, thrilling the heart of the lonely Leader, who in this hour of being understood and trusted, "Thou art the Christ." With all his faults, Peter had that spiritual faculty which discerns the inwardness of truth. His was elemental wisdom.

A Great Soul's Offering.

Lifting its snow-crowned head in grandeur so high that it dominates the entire region of Palestine from Jerusalem north, stands Mt. Hermon, strong in its majesty and beauty. To the solitude and strength of this mountain Jesus had taken His friends. At its foot, in or near Caesarea Philippi, He underwent this experience. "Whom say ye that I am?" Here He faced the question of what He had come into the world for and how far the world recognized Him and His mission. Into every strong life there come these experiences, when the soul is searched to its depths, and the eternal "why" is frouted in all its solemnity.

Suffering by anticipation is keenest pain. It is not the shock of the bullet in the body, but the thought of it that hurts the more. Jesus underwent it. Cavalry in spirit, He saw the shadow of examination and of realized public appraisal meant to Him we cannot understand. We know that His soul was exceedingly sorrowful. Out of the depths of this hour flowed the sublime teaching of self-renunciation. Here Christ lifted up the cross upon which He later was to be lifted.

A Friend's Foolish Counsel.

Nobody suffers alone. We are tied together in the bundle of life, for weal or for woe. The sharpest thorn in the Leader's crown of sorrow was the knowledge of the suffering of His disciples. To prepare them for what lay before them, Jesus began to teach and to be subjected by the elders and the chief priests and the scribes and the Pharisees. Without figure of speech and with utmost directness and plainness He told these men who were looking forward to earthly crowns that the world had for them nothing better than crosses.

At this point the mistake which is being made every day by fond parents and friends is seen in its plainness. Peter, who wanted to spare his dear Master the suffering which Jesus had indicated.

Just so there are some short-sighted families who would keep their sons from the man whose confession was the key of heaven, "Get thee behind me, Satan." Whatever leads one aside from his true destiny is of the evil from the worst of all mistakes in life is to seek the easy way. The temptation to escape the burdens and hardships of life by shirking clear duty is a temptation from Satan himself, even though it come in the guise of a friend.

Something of shock comes to us as we find the gentle Master saying sharply to the man whose confession was the key of heaven, "Get thee behind me, Satan." Whatever leads one aside from his true destiny is of the evil from the worst of all mistakes in life is to seek the easy way. The temptation to escape the burdens and hardships of life by shirking clear duty is a temptation from Satan himself, even though it come in the guise of a friend.

GAVE UP HER HOME TO WAR WOUNDED

COUNTESS OF ONSLOW.

Not only her home in London, but her time and service has the Countess of Onslow given to the wounded soldiers who fought the fight of liberty in northern France. Before the war the Countess' mansion was filled with gay parties, and her hours with social affairs. But not so now. The home has been turned into a hospital, and the Countess is the nurse of the wounded men of war.

The Trademark of Christianity.

A New York advertising man, Herbert Houston, once spoke of the cross as the "trademark of Christianity." That was a happy phrase, and more. It shows deep insight into the mind of the genuine article is always known by its trademark. True Christianity never lacks the cross. The followers of Christ all wear His brand; as Paul said, "I bear in my body the brand marks of the Lord Jesus." In the work of our lesson, Jesus himself says, "If any man would come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow me."

The size of a human soul is measured by its capacity for suffering. The greatest saints have been those to whom the cross was the most real experience. That symbol of suffering and of sacrifice and of service is more than a symbol; it is a life reality. Out of the depths of His own agony in the "passion of the north" Jesus delivered to humanity the great truth of the life spent in suffering and in service. What else than this is the deepest need of our day—men and women who will lose their lives for the world's sake, and who will pour out their souls unto death, and who are crucified with Christ, that the world may have the life of Christ? In this vicariousness is victory.
